WAGNER AND GORDON.

The "Smutty Nose" Murder—The Triple Tragedy at Thorndike—Five victims to the Passions of Two Men—History of the Crimes.

LOUIS H. F. WAGNER

One of the most terrible crimes in the history of the State was that which began known as the "Smutty Nose" murder. Two years ago next month on the night of March 1873 two women were killed and a third nearly perished from cold after having escaped a similar fate on Smutty Nose Island one of the groups of seven Isles of Shoals situated near the mouth of the Piscataqua River, four lying in Maine and three in New Hampshire. The names of the two women were Anethe M. Christensen and Karen Christensen, that of the other who escaped was Mary S. Hontvet.

The statements of the survivor led to the arrest of Louis H. F. Wagner within twenty four hours after in Boston, where he had changed his appearance by shaving off his whiskers. He was first taken to Portsmouth, which is some ten miles from the Island, but the details [illegible] to the jurisdiction of the New Hampshire court [illegible] was delivered to the authorities of this State for trial. The preliminary examination was held at South Berwick, resulting in the full commitment of the prisoner. At the May term of the Supreme Judicial Court held at Alfred, York county, two indictments were found [illegible] the sitting of the Court Judge Barrows ordered [illegible] immediately following Wagner was arraigned. The trial [illegible] Not guilty to the charge of murdering of Anethe M. Christensen. He was defended by Hon. R. P. Tapley of Saco, assisted by Max Fisher, Esq., of Boston, the prosecution being conducted by Hon. H. M. Plaisted, attorney General, assisted by George C. Yeaton, Esq., County Attorney.

The principal witness [illegible] was Mrs. Mary S. Hontvet, sister of Karen Christensen, one of the murdered women, and sister-in-law to Anethe Christensen the other. Her evidence showed that they three were alone in the house that night, the rest having left on the Island on that night of the occurrence. The doors were unfastened, and the curtains were up. She and Anethe slept together in the bedroom, [illegible] Karen lay on a lounge in the kitchen. [illegible] was awakened by [illegible] and after a short but brave struggle, to which her courage and [illegible] Wagner [illegible] Louis — [illegible] to an apartment [illegible] Christensen [illegible] the [illegible] rock, while the work of death was completed at the house. The murderer pulled down the curtains, lit a lamp, and deliberately proceeded to ransack the house for money. Wagner had formerly lived there and knew the premises thoroughly. Having completed his search, he went to a well near by, but could not have been known to a stranger, attempted to wash away the [illegible] blood stains and then departed from the Island. After sunrise Mrs. Hontvet, more dead than alive, from cold, having been through the snow barefooted and in her night clothes, left her concealment and succeeded in attracting attention that brought others to her assistance.

By a number of witnesses it was shown that Wagner had said he must have money if he had to murder for it; that he had satisfied himself that the women were alone that night; that he had been seen at such hour only the night before and the morning after as would have given him time to do the deed while he could give no satisfactory account of where he was in the interim; that his appearance when next seen at his boarding house in Portsmouth at breakfast time, was such as to excite unusual attention; that a paltry sum of money was secured by the murderer; and finally that while the day before Wagner had not money enough to pay his board or even to buy smoking tobacco, the day after he had money enough to pay his fare to Boston, and make a variety of small purchases.

While this but briefly outlines the case, there were a score of witnesses and a hundred circumstances that all tended to a single conclusion. The defence was made with great care, but the argument of the Attorney General was able and convincing. The trial closed June 18, having occupied nine days, and resulted in a verdict of "guilty of murder in the first degree," the jury being out less than an hour.

By his counsel, Wagner moved an arrest of judgment on account of the insufficiency of the case in form and substance, and because it did not "in any legal manner set out and disclose any offence, and particularly the offence found by the Jury in said case." A bill of exceptions was accordingly filed, and these were argued before the full bench, at the Law term of the western district, July 1873, and overruled. At the September term, of the same year, Judge Peters presiding, Wagner was sentenced to be executed, after one year's confinement in the State Prison.

At a session of the Governor and council, which was held in Augusta, September 16, 1874, after a careful review of the case, a vote was unanimously passed by the council advising the Governor to fix the 29th day of January of this year, for the execution, and Governor Dingley issued the warrant accordingly.

Knowing that the subject of capital punishment would be brought before this winter's session of the State Legislature, and pending such action as might be taken in the matter, the Governor granted a reprieve till the 25th day of this month, at which time also, Gordon was sentenced to death. The Legislature having refused to abolish capital punishment preparations were made for the executions on the above date.

During his confinement in Alfred jail, June 28, 1873 Wagner, together with two other prisoners, made his escape. Five hundred dollars reward was offered for his apprehension, and a day or two subsequently he was recaptured in Farmington, N. H., and returned to this State. Since his sentence he has been confined in the State Prison, where he is said to have conducted himself well, stoutly maintaining his innocence the whole time. He is thirty years of age, has lived in this country nine years, and followed the sea for about [illegible] ten years.

JOHN TRUE GORDON

A crime more revolting in all its details than that of which Wagner was convicted, more inhuman if ever expected, and more startling to this community from its near proximity, was the terrible tragedy at Thorndike, which occurred on Sunday night, June 16, 1873 while the trial of Wagner was in progress. On the succeeding morning full details were given in a special despatch to the WHIG AND COURIER. The victims were Almon M. Gordon, aged twenty three years, his wife Emma A. Gordon three years younger, and their child, a little girl sixteen months old. Alfred [illegible] and [illegible] a year old [illegible] who was [illegible] supposed to be fatally wounded [illegible] recovered, and as in the Wagner case the [illegible] former [illegible] it was.

The Gordon family consisted of Colonel John Gordon, his wife, three sons and daughter [illegible] John's wife [illegible] and Gordon's oldest son, John True Gordon then twenty [illegible] years of age [illegible] unmarried. They all lived together on the homestead, where the younger [illegible] which was the [illegible] city of the [illegible] couple.

The night of the murder [illegible] the family were visiting relatives in the city. A young man by the name of Ward, a workman on the farm, slept with the [illegible] of the Gordons for the first time that night. About 3 o'clock Monday morning he was aroused by the cries of one of the children and, a light and the smoke. [illegible] the door [illegible] John the elder brother who slept with the little boy [illegible] was [illegible] John was [illegible] by [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] a bloody axe by the [illegible] door. He rushed [illegible] the house to alarm the neighbors but [illegible] the house [illegible] told him to help save the things. [illegible] burned to the ground [illegible] those who [illegible] Ward [illegible] were [illegible] the room of Almon and his wife both [illegible] murder [illegible] child [illegible] strange [illegible] a neighbor [illegible] seized and bound.

[illegible] found [illegible] the supposed jealousy of John at the [illegible] his younger [illegible] and [illegible] the property. A short time previous to [illegible] the Colonel Gordon had conveyed [illegible] a valued [illegible] $3,000 [illegible] support [illegible] himself and [illegible].

The Coroner's inquest resulted in a verdict that the victims were killed by an axe in the hands of John True Gordon. Meantime he was committed to Belfast jail, and Jan 20 on being arraigned before the Police Court, examination was waived and the prisoner was remanded to jail to await the action of the Grand Jury the third Tuesday in October 1873. On the 31st of the month Gordon was arraigned before Chief Justice Appleton on an indictment charging him with the murder of Mrs. Emma A. Gordon. The prisoner seemed entirely unconcerned and plead "Not guilty" in a firm, clear tone.

The trial commenced November 10 and Hon. W. H. McLellan and George E. Walker, esq., appeared for the prisoner, the prosecution was conducted by Attorney General Plaisted, assisted by county attorney Taylor of Belfast. November 20, after a nine days' trial, the jury brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, a little over an hour being occupied by the twelve in reaching this decision. This was received by Gordon without exhibition of feeling. The motion for a new trial was overruled but exceptions to the charge were allowed. The exceptions were overruled and January 1, 1874, the sentence of death was pronounced by Judge Dickerson. Gordon briefly addressed the court, affirming his innocence of the crime. He was immediately taken to the State Prison, where he has been confined while awaiting the time for the execution of the death penalty, which the warrant fixed for to-day.

The reprieve of the two men for thirty days is announced in our telegraphic columns.

ANECDOTE OF THADDEUS STEVENS.—The following authentic anecdote of the late Thaddeus Stevens (contributed by a prominent ex-member of Congress) contains a grain of pure Attic salt, which some of those who are in the habit of searching The Drawer for that condiment may relish:

Time—the close of the "long session" of the Fortieth Congress, July 27, 1868. Place—office of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, Washington. Dramatis Personæ—a group of impecunious M. C.'s, waiting to draw their arrears of pay, [illegible] ed on a lounge in the background John F. Driggs, then representing the Superior mining district of Michigan, and Thaddeus Stevens, of Pennsylvania. The "Old Commoner" was then on the very verge of the grave, "night to [illegible] door," as he himself expressed it [illegible] two weeks afterward; but although his shrunken frame gave painful evidence of "natural force abated," his eye [illegible] lustrous orb that glittered from but [illegible] cavernous depths beneath the beetling [illegible] of a massive forehead like the "black [illegible] in the mine—"was not dim."

Driggs was particularly jubilant over the passage of a bill imposing a higher rate of duty on copper, in which his constituents were deeply interested, and Mr. Stevens, in his habitual vein of sarcastic humor, was "chaffing" him about it, alleging among other things, that he had got the bill through by bribery. (This was in allusion to some nuggets of virgin copper rudely moulded into the form of paper weights which Driggs had distributed among members with whom he was personally intimate as souvenirs of the mineral wealth of his district.)

Upon that hint of "bribery" spake Mr. Steven's colleague from the Berks County district, "By-the-way Mr. Stevens, Driggs gave me one of those paper weights, and I voted for his bill. Tell me—your experience is so much greater than mine—can I take it home with me and keep it without being accused of accepting a bribe?"

"Well, yes," was the reply, uttered with all the gravity of a judge pronouncing an opinion, "you can keep it as it is; but as you value your good name, don't have it coined into pennies." —[Harper's Magazine for March.]

COTTON MANUFACTURING

ITS ADAPTATION TO BANGOR

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 22, 1875.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier:

At this time when the subject of cotton manufacturing is being talked [illegible] about by the business men of Bangor a few words from a Rhode Islander of some experience in the business of making Print cloth [illegible] cotton [illegible] that at no distant day a movement will be made towards utilizing the excellent water power of Bangor [illegible] either by her own citizens or foreign capital [illegible] it is not competent to speak of the locking of [illegible] would commend [illegible] topic for the consideration of those [illegible] rest [illegible] the expense of erecting and running a mill of this kind would be less very important points for new beginners to [illegible] As to [illegible] Print cloths [illegible] 28 inches [illegible] square [illegible] 5 [illegible] sold [illegible] called [illegible] combines [illegible] 5,000 [illegible] 1870. [illegible] the owners for the [illegible] cotton mill to provide tenements for the operatives and in many [illegible] boarding houses and stores [illegible] tenements and boarding houses for the married portion and single parties the [illegible] to supply the help with [illegible] and other things necessary to a comfortable living. As will readily appear by this plan both the help and owners [illegible] benefitted. [illegible] to purchase their goods at as reasonable rates as elsewhere [illegible] controlling the funds [illegible] amount of each operative's [illegible] is deducted from the monthly wages [illegible] day of paying [illegible] its [illegible] [illegible] there is a [illegible] capital [illegible] believe that they are [illegible] with the [illegible].

[illegible] New England present better points than Bangor for building [illegible] by a first rate mill and other buildings [illegible] there is well [illegible] the only other material required [illegible] building, including also the machinery necessary for the complete running of a factory of the nature mentioned [illegible] Bangor [illegible] almost any [illegible] New England [illegible] the [illegible] to [illegible] during the year, but [illegible] are [illegible] Bucksport [illegible] [illegible] round.

Yours truly,

C. S. BROWN.

SAVING FERTILIZERS.—I used to pity a neighbor of mine who every day went out to milk a cow or two in a barn yard which was used as a compost heap. His stables were cleaned and the manure thrown into this little yard and all the refuse of the kitchen garden and the leaves from the dooryard were neatly raked up and thrown there also to be trampled upon and made into excellent fertilizers. It was all very well, only that Bridget had to do her share of the trampling and in wet weather the mud there was quite over the top of her old shoes. She was a tidy, decent girl, who liked to be neatly dressed in the afternoon but there was that [illegible] milking to be done at night, so where was the use?

It was a shame for a rich man to allow such a slipshod arrangement [illegible] with handsome [illegible] A neat, commodious place for milking was the least he could provide to make this irksome business comfortable. It pays to make good plank walks from the barn door to the compost heap and then to have the manure wheeled out every morning, instead of being thrown out just before the door. It is more labor, but the gain in neatness and comfort will more than offset this extra labor.

A good compost heap is the farmer's bank. A great many poor farms which abound in red sorrel, might be made garden spots if only the materials close at hand were utilized upon it. There is the handy swamp, with its hundreds of loads of muck, ready to be hauled out and made into excellent fertilizer. There is the old woodland, with the richest mould lying by the wagon load about the base of the old stumps, and along by its rotting logs.—There too are leaves in abundance, which, if used for bedding first will make very good manure, though they hardly pay for hauling except when used for this purpose. Just throw them into your hog pens and the hogs will rejoice in them, and work them over into the finest fertilizer very successful farmers "make a great account" of hog power in this matter of preparing fertilizers. The farmer may have stated it rather strongly who said he "would rather have a cob that a hog had breathed on than a wheelbarrow load of new-fangled fertilizers," but his remark points in a practical direction.

Give the sun and air a fair chance at your loads of swamp muck and leaves before you add it to the manure pile, and you will increase its value enough to pay for the extra trouble. The suds and slops from the kitchen should all be allowed to run down to it by the way of a waste pipe or trough, but never ask the weary housekeeper to take the many steps necessary to carry out her buckets on wash day or any other day.—[Cor. N. E. Farmer.]

EASTERN RAILROAD

TERMINAL FREIGHT FACILITIES

In our recent notice of the Eastern Railroad, reference was made to the heavy expenditures incurred by the road on account of enlarged room and facilities for handling freight. It is understood that about [illegible] million dollars were laid out in buying the new grounds at Charlestown including some sixty acres of flats and nine acres of upland. This is one of the heaviest of the recent outlays of the company for extraordinary purposes, and the one that has perhaps more than any other, excited comment and criticism. The fact of the case is, however, that the property lay in such shape as to owners that to get possession of any or at least anything like an adequate amount it was necessary to buy all that was bought. It is only a little time since the grounds at East Boston were supposed to be ample beyond all possible demands of the business of the road. Yet they are and were entirely outgrown. The experience of other railroads has been similar to this. Where one has bought too much station room a score have had to lament buying too little. The signs are, that the Eastern road in the comparatively near future, will find its provision not at all extravagant. Already nine hundred cars, freight and passenger, enter and leave its Boston stations daily. These, as well as the teams for moving goods, require a great deal of room. The population of the cities and towns traversed by the main line of the road betwixt Boston and Portland is now 170,000. Several of the municipalities, after a long period of comparative industrial stagnation, have entered upon a prosperous career of manufacturing activity and growth. The fact that the road carried over six million passengers last year, or more than any other in the State, is proof of the rapid secular circulation [illegible]

THURLOW WEED'S OPINIONS.

[From the Providence Journal.]

Mr. Thurlow Weed is a man who for more than one generation has been actively engaged in political affairs, and that without holding office. Forty years ago, the Albany Evening Journal under his editorship, was one of the controlling papers in the country. The influence of Mr. Weed has been felt not merely in the politics of the Empire State, but in national affairs. Perhaps no man living has a better knowledge of the affairs of our country. Like the late Lord of English statesmen, Mr. Weed has arrived at a green old age in the apparently full vigor of his mental faculties; and his views, whether accepted or not, are therefore well worth considering. He publishes in the New York Tribune, a four-column letter upon the condition of the Republican party. As an acute observer, and so far as we know, an impartial adviser, his ideas respecting the cause of its present position must be taken at least as one allowable mode of fairly looking at them. In a word, he believes that no administration could have prevented the evils necessarily flowing from the exhaustive consequences of a long and expensive war, to which we would add that the speculations and extravagance in living following the prolonged use of a depreciated currency, materially supplemented the inevitable depressions flowing from an abnormal business activity engaged in manufacturing and transporting merely military, and therefore unproductive, supplies.

But there are some things, in the opinion of Mr. Weed, other than the inevitable which have weighed down the party. The satisfy lack and the popular belief in the desire of the President for a third term, openly, the first seriously and the latter incidentally, to injure the party in the Congressional elections. On the other hand, Mr. Weed finds in the teachings and tendencies of the Democratic party a malign element, which has been illustrated in Connecticut by the choice of a Democratic United States Senator whose sentiments and proclivities were against the government in its struggle to repress the rebellion. The general determination to resume specie payments would go more than half-way toward resumption; and a law of Congress imposing duties on silks, velvets, jewelry, wines, &c., limited in its operation to two years, that would virtually prohibit during that period their importation, would bring about resumption without an effort. And here, entering upon the theme of individual extravagance, Mr. Weed makes some specific statements which are doubtless beyond dispute, and which are, in a greater or less degree, applicable to almost every body throughout the country. He says there are 10,000 ladies in New York, whose ball-dress costumes cost at least $1,000 each. That fifteen years ago these ladies would have appeared as dressed quite as attractively at an average expense of $250. Ten thousand children in that city are now clothed more and fantastically dressed at the expense of from $100 to $150 each, while fifteen years ago they would have been assisted at a cost of from $20 to $25.

The same growing extravagance will be found in any village in the United States. If, then, we could get anywhere near back to our old habits of expenditure, with what we should obtain quite as much genuine comfort, a good deal would be done in the direction of resumption. Our public domain, Mr. Weed thinks, has been recklessly squandered, although he has never objected to aiding meritorious railroads through such demand. He is in favor of a wisely-adjusted tariff, but does not consider the present to be such. The despotism of Trades Unions is deprecated, and their ill-effects upon the workmen and the quality, as well, of work, are argued. The difficulties attending reconstruction are considered, and the assertion made that if, when the rebellion was conquered, the whites of the South had yielded to the inevitable, and recognized their former slaves as freedmen, and had treated them kindly and offered them employment with reasonable wages, the designs of the carpet-baggers would have been thwarted. Mr. Weed does not favor the Civil Rights bill. If there is nothing especially new in this letter, it is the voice of one who has had peculiar facilities for observation, who writes in no partisan sense, who would rather see an honest and capable Democrat elected President than an incapable Republican, and who is firm in the conviction that the country would not be safe in the supreme control of the Democratic party.

The editor of the Bangor Democrat and Commercial adds a triple dye to his treasonable record in the rebellion by declaring that he has "on three several occasions taken an official oath to support the Constitution of the United States." If there is any technicality by which he can escape the ban imposed by the Fourteenth Amendment of that Constitution upon all who, after swearing to support it, have either openly engaged in rebellion or given aid or comfort to the "enemies" of the United States, he owes it to the text and not to the spirit of the law. The public will be amazed that a man can thus add to his own infamy by boasting that he had registered three solemn oaths to support the Constitution of his country, at the time when he was applauding and encouraging its armed enemies, heaping vile abuse upon the noble President who was stricken down by assassination for defending it, and offering insult and outrage to the loyal soldiers who fought and fell in the struggle for its preservation. But the ex-General Gordons and the John Young Browns are again coming to the front and the most notorious, bomb-proof rebel of Maine must needs press forward with his credentials. He did not shoulder a musket in the rebel army, but holds up his three broken oaths and claims recognition by the "great statesmen" of the Confederacy.

If the individual who anonymously applies a number of epithets to the editor of this paper through the columns of the Commercial, will present his name to the public, we shall be able to gauge the extent of our grief at his displeasure, and "the Republican party of the city," will know to whom they are indebted for such vigorous championship. Step out into the light and let us have a look at you.

It is proposed to divide the Civil Service of Great Britain into two classes of officers, according to their pay, with a class of boy-clerks as a sort of feeding reserve to the lower division. The lower clerks are to be selected by an open competitive examination, not making any great demands on them; then there is to be a trying competition for admission to the higher division, but it will be in the power of the chief of the department to assign their work and to select the best men for promotion.

THE BANGOR WATER BILL.

AN ERROR IN ITS ENGROSSMENT.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier

If the bill to provide Bangor with pure water as published by you this morning is, as we understand, printed from the official copy, we have to say that a very important error has been committed by the Committee on Engrossed Bills or by some other person or persons at Augusta.

The amendments to the 12th section were rejected by the Senate, and this action was concurred in by the House, so that the 12th section as acted upon by the Legislature in passing to be engrossed reads as follows.

SECTION 12. The Bangor Water Company, or any person or persons named in the act incorporating said company, may petition the supreme court for the county of Penobscot, setting forth that said company, person or persons have a claim against the city of Bangor, growing out of monies advanced or services performed to secure the introduction of water into said city, and after notice, a hearing shall be had of the parties, and the court shall determine whether the petitioners have any legal or equitable claim upon said city, and in case said court shall determine that such claim exists, then, and not otherwise, the court shall appoint three suitable men to determine the amount of such claim, and the same proceedings shall be had as in case of a reference of an action in court under the laws of this State.

Section 12 was passed to be engrossed just as it came from the committee as above printed. Respectfully,

J. W. PALMER,
F. A. WILSON,
J. S. WHEELWRIGHT.

Bangor, Feb 25, 1875.

[The bill was printed by us according to the official copy forwarded to the Mayor from the office of the Secretary of State. By comparing the above extract with the text of Section 12 in the official copy printed by us on Thursday, the erroneous additions may be observed.—EDITOR.]

NATIONAL IMPROVEMENTS IN THE SECTIONS. The idea inculcated by some Western politicians that the great bulk of the national money laid out on internal improvements has been expended at and for the benefit of the East, is very far from being correct. From the adoption of the Constitution to June, 1873, the sum of $53,689,340 was expended for the improvement of rivers and harbors. The Western rivers secured $21,138,360, the Northern lakes $10,057,138, and the Atlantic coast $9,787,173. This shows a pretty even division and no cause for complaint. The nearly twenty-six millions, also, which have been laid out on Washington city, were for the whole country in the matter of marine hospitals and lighthouses it will surprise most persons to learn that the largest sum expended in any one State has gone to Michigan, and the next to Louisiana—the former being $1,879,380, and the latter $1,663,543. Louisiana, also, stands second in the list for the sums expended for custom houses, court houses and post offices having taken therefor $3,846,678. Even South Carolina, so jealous, under its old regime of Federal interference, stands fourth in the list. The business importance and the revenues of these States contrast singularly with several of those of the Northwest which have had less money from the Treasury.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

Nearly all the new U. S. Senators are carpet-baggers—those elected by Democratic votes as well as the others.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune says there is reason to believe that some not very grave concessions in the House report would have secured for it a majority of the Louisiana Committee.

It is well known that the rebel element of Arkansas has just adopted a new Constitution. In the Constitution of 1868 there was a prohibition of secession. In the Constitution of 1874 this prohibition is struck out. Why?

After the nomination had been made in the Democratic Congressional Convention of the New Haven District, Connecticut, a Mr. McGrail said of the candidate "This thing has been put up, and he will never be elected—never, gentlemen, never be elected."

The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, whose editor is said to have had exceptional opportunities of late for learning the truth, says: "The determination of the Radicals of the South, and indeed, to consummate a division of the Union, and the establishment of a Southern Confederacy, in which there shall at least be no negro suffrage. If there is not a restoration of slavery. This is their one fixed, unalterable purpose. So-called Southern Conservatives—in reality Rebel Radicals—have got the Democratic party by the throat."

The recent Republican triumph in the charter election of Philadelphia moves the North American of that city to say that it throws much light on the general political prospect next fall, the editor adding:

"The people are not yet tired of Republican doctrine or policy, and certainly show no evidence of any willingness to intrust themselves to Democratic control. The ends of approaching power, the Democrats began to show the cloven foot almost before the echoes of their gunpowder rejoicings over their victories had fully died away, and as a consequence those who were wavering began to see the dangers into which they were threatening to plunge the country."

The Hon. W. G. Brownlow, in the salutatory of his new paper, makes this sanguine prediction: "Nor do I read the signs of the times as those who believe that the country is to be afflicted with the success of the Democratic party in the Presidential election of 1876. On the contrary, the indications point to the defeat of that party in the great national contest. And I here predict that the great party which has controlled the National Government for fifteen years will not only have a new lease of power in 1876, but the day is not far distant when it will redeem and regenerate Tennessee."

CONSUMPTIVES, TAKE NOTICE.

Every moment of delay makes your cure more hopeless, and much depends on the judicious choice of a remedy. The testimony of testimony in favor of Dr Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, as a cure for consumption, far exceeds that ever before brought to support the pretensions of any other medicine. Dr Schenck's Seaweed Tonic, containing the certificates of many persons of the highest respectability, who have been restored to health after having pronounced incurable by physicians, is also highly recommended. Dr Schenck's Mandrake Pills. In the early use of these medicines, according to directions, Dr Schenck declares that hundreds cases of Consumption might be cured.

Dr Schenck will visit the Quincy House, Boston, on the following Wednesdays, from 9 to 3 o'clock: Jan 20th and 27th, Feb 10th and 24th, and March 10th and 24th, Consultation free, but for each thorough examination of the lungs, with the Respirometer, the price is $5.

Dr Schenck is professionally at his principal office, Corner Sixth and Arch streets, Philadelphia, every Monday, where all letters of advice must be addressed.

JOHN CUMMINGS of Boston, President Shawmut National Bank.
JAMES W. JOHNSON of Exeter, N. H.
Hon. FRANK JONES of Portsmouth, N. H.

BENJ. E. BATES of Boston, President National Bank of Commerce
Hon. HENRY P. WILLIAMS of Salem, Mass.
Gen. SAMUEL C. LAWRENCE of Medford, Mass.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT of the COMPANY.

The EASTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, with its main stem from Boston, Mass., to Portland, Me., now operates 260 miles of road, of which 40 miles have a double track, and 64 miles are laid with steel rails, and the entire line, including bridges and stations, is now in a better condition than it has ever been before in its history.

The Equipment has been increased fully 10 per cent. during the past few years, and is now ample and of a superior order.

The GREAT ADVANTAGES of the extensive freight houses and grounds recently acquired and improved, with the wharves for ocean ship navigation, are not excelled by any railroad radiating from the City of Boston.

The inducements now established for shipping and connecting roads are numerous, and such as tend to check the competition which in past years has prevailed as to a portion of the business of the road.

SINCE THE ROAD was opened to Salem in 1838, it has not failed to earn an annual income over and above all interest and operating expenses, and has returned to its original shareholders more than 200 per cent. in dividends.

The ANNUAL STATEMENT of the business of the road, for the fiscal year ending November 30, 1874, shows a net income of $1,076,923.24, more than sufficient to pay all interest, rent and rental charges by $600,423.60, which is the surplus for the year, and after charging off certain extraordinary expenses of previous years, leaves a balance of $422,423.41 carried forward to the credit of the current income account.

The extension of the road, since October 1, 1874, when the new terminal freight grounds became available, have shown a much larger income than previously, over the corresponding months of the preceding year, so that with a continuance of these conditions, and the floating debt thus fed, the surplus income for the current year will enable the Company in a position to resume the regular dividends (or deferred for the three periods since the first in 1874.

The Bonds of the Company, including the Funded Debt 7 per cent. Loan, is now reported for at an average rate of 10 per cent. per annum, exhibiting the Company's credit sterling equivalent to 7 per cent interest.

For the EXTINGUISHMENT of the entire floating debt of the Company, the purchase of the extensive freight facilities required for the future, and for the completion of the road, the Company, being duly authorized by the unanimous vote of the Directors of the Eastern Railroad Company, duly assembled in Boston on the first day of each year, in accordance with the provisions of the Charter, have created a Funded Debt of $2,500,000, payable on the first day of September, 1894, with interest at seven per cent. payable semi-annually on the first days of May and November, at the Agency of the Company in New York, or at the Agency in Boston, which is obligated to the Company.

The Directors have issued certificates, the bearer is entitled to receive, on the first day of September, 1894, the sum of $1,000 each, with interest from the registration of principal and interest, if required, and to receive 6% annually thereafter, and transfers to bearer at the option of the holders.

[illegible] for a SINKING FUND for this loan has established for the redemption at Par of one [illegible] of this issue for the first year, increasing [illegible] by one-half of one per cent. of each issued, such amounts to be applied to the purchase of such of the bonds as may be designated by public crowing in Boston on the first day of each year. In case any of the bonds are not presented for redemption, it is provided that [illegible] is practicable that an equivalent amount of the bonds will be purchased by the Company and [illegible] whenever the [illegible] cent. on the issue at par or below that rate.

It is [illegible] that all the property of the Company is entirely free from mortgage or [illegible] and the [illegible] provided in this loan, the Company never to be [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] such lien ever to be subsequently [illegible].

It is [illegible] vote of the Stockholders, duly called and convening on the action of the Directors, [illegible] amount of bonds and to [illegible] the issue of the [illegible] Loan, that not exceed a sum of twelve and one half millions of [illegible].

[illegible] Stockholders of the Company, is the present time, [illegible] $11,445,200, the ACTUAL outstanding is $7,500,000, with authority to the sum of $8,810,000.

JOHN WOOLDRIDGE,
President of the Eastern Railroad Company.

[illegible] HARRISON, HILL & CO., of Boston, [illegible] by the Eastern Railroad Company [illegible] above described loan for sale, and to [illegible] sealed proposals until Monday, the first day [illegible] next, at noon, for purchase thereof, [illegible] receiving a minimum price of ninety per [illegible] Three per Interest, below which no offers [illegible] accepted.

[illegible] will be first made to the highest and [illegible] in case of applications exceeding the [illegible] will be pro rata under the first subscription [illegible] and to the next highest and [illegible].

[illegible] should be prepared on Proposition Bonds of the Funded Debt Loan, they will be [illegible] at the office of the Company, in Boston, [illegible] room, and the aforementioned [illegible] as soon as possible.

[illegible] to or after will be ready for delivery on the 15th of March, when payments are to be made prior to which date debentures will be made [illegible] certificates therefor, by the transferable of the Company.

[illegible] who desire may, for payment for one or more purchases until any time previous to the 1st of May next, with adjustment of interest to [illegible] of warrants to any of those subscribing to this [illegible].

WAGNER AND GORDON RE-PRIEVED

AUGUSTA, Feb 25 Judge Danforth has received the application of Mr Bagley, counsel for Wagner and Gordon for an injunction restraining the execution of both convictions on certain grounds and has given the Governor notice of a hearing Accordingly he has granted a respite to both Wagner and Gordon for four weeks, which will be forwarded to the sheriff of Knox county to-day, directing him to suspend the execution of both convicts

The Point Raised on the Constitutionality of the Law

Gov Dingley with the advice and consent of the Council, reprieved Wagner till March 26 on being advised by Judge Danforth that in his judgment, a point had been raised by counsel Bagley counsel for Wagner which is regarded as important enough to justify a hearing in case it should be given Judge Virgin was also present and concurred in this view I understood that both Judge thought that the point raised by the counsel was fairly presented by the record and the warrants was issued by the Governor direct whether new issued by the Governor direct whether new issued by the Governor direct whether new
